Sunday, March 2, 2014

After Saturday's races, the Austin Rowing Club regatta committee and the coaches of the Juniors teams met to discuss the implications of the hazardous weather predicted for Sunday. Expecting that racing might well be shut down at some point on Sunday, they agreed that each event's heats would be raced as usual but would not progress to a final. Instead, the heats would be treated as a single race for purposes of assigning places and awarding medals.

Sunday's first races enjoyed warm and humid weather, but the Doppler radar showed trouble approaching from the west. Many teams, especially ones which had to travel northward to Dallas or Oklahoma, had scratched all of their entries and departed, hoping to reach home ahead of the predicted high winds, freezing rain, thunderstorms, and hail.

In the tabulations that follow, combined heats are indicated by asterisks.

 The referee on the water was unable to record the first-place time for the A heat. Had it been a true heat, followed by progression of each heat's first three boats to the final, this would have been of little consequence. In the absence of a final, the best we can do is to assign the A heat's winning boat the same time as the B heat's winning boat.

Sunday 11:36am

By this point in the morning, the cold front had arrived, with gusty winds and cold rain. Perhaps lulled by Saturday's balmy spring-like conditions, many competitors were far from appropriately clothed. Seeing that conditions promised to deteriorate further, the regatta committee regretfully cancelled the remaining races. Event 238 was the last event to be completed prior to cancelling the remaining races.

Trophy Point Standings for Juniors Events

Points are computed using the USRowing formula (USRowing 2013 Rules of Rowing, page 66).

NOTE: Because racing was curtailed on Sunday because of bad weather, and because Sunday's heats were combined in a nonstandard manner, these point totals should be regarded with a high degree of skepticism, and accorded minimal significance.
